160 Colorado companies to be recognized as environmental leaders

DENVER - The Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment will recognize 160 companies Oct. 16 for outstanding environmental achievements that help keep Colorado a desirable place to work and live. The department, in partnership with the Pollution Prevention Advisory Board and the Colorado Environmental Partnership, will present the 16th annual Environmental Leadership Awards at the Wings Over the Rockies Air & Space Museum Oct. 16. More than 300 government, business and community leaders are expected to attend.

The awards recognize Colorado organizations with gold, silver and bronze designations for voluntarily going beyond compliance with state and federal regulations and for their commitment to continual environmental improvement.

“We are proud to recognize all of Colorado’s environmental leaders and work with them to reduce barriers to innovation while protecting public health and the environment,” said department Executive Director and Chief Medical Officer Dr. Larry Wolk.

This year’s program will recognize 12 new Gold Leaders, which join 85 other companies and organizations already designated as Gold Leaders. The new Gold Leaders include Arrow Value Recovery, Project Angel Heart and Pitkin County Landfill. There currently are 34 companies designated as Silver Partners and 29 companies designated as Bronze Achievers.

The 2015 24-Karat Gold Award winner will be named at the Oct. 16 event. 24-Karat Gold Award winners are individuals or teams, nominated by other Gold Leaders, that have gone above and beyond required job duties to create and implement a program or initiative that made a measurable contribution to the environment, the economy and society. The Colorado Environmental Leadership Program is open to all Colorado businesses, industries, offices, educational institutions, municipalities, government agencies, communities, nonprofits and other organizations.
