Hello, I guess if you need to move it, go ahead. Whoever moves it needs to protect the stone at all times. The stone will stain if greasy rags are used and grease is impossible to get out of marble. It needs to be wrapped with either a clean towel or plastic wrap where they strap it. And when they are grinding or welding the stone must be protected.
Thanks, Nathan

Hi Nathan,

I hope this email finds you well in the new year!

Due to a fast tracked construction project, we will likely need to relocate TWL #1 in Castle Rock prior to February. The Art Commission meets next week and can, at that time, discuss a new placement location. I just wanted to reach out to you, however, before the Commission meets to make sure you are OKAY with us moving the sculpture. Once the group approves a new location, I'll send you an update for your stamp of approval. Our contract does state that we'll need your approval in writing prior to relocating the piece.

Also, would you feel comfortable having the same guys who helped you install the piece move it to its new spot or would you prefer to be present for the relocation?

Thank you in advance for understanding! Please don't hesitate to call my direct line to discuss.
