ANGELICA

Description	ANGELICA Angelica is a Pterophyllum, also known as the angelfish. Angelfish are one of the most popular aquarium fish who are known for their graceful swimming. The thought of creating an angelfish sculpture began the day I found the rock that is now the head of Angelica. As you can see, the body consists of a variety of materials such as gears, hubcaps and garage door springs. It was like putting a puzzle together while creating this sculpture as I looked for "just the right piece" to fit perfectly.

SUNRISE IN FLAGSTAFF

Description	Hand crafted multilayered Iron art. I start this process by bending the 3/4" hollow hammered tube frame in a hydraulic press, next it is welded togather. Then I draw each successive layer on 18 - 22 gauge sheet iron, after each layer is drawn, I then use a hand plasma torch to cut out the shape for each layer. Coloring is the next process, I use several different methods during the coloring to attain the desired effects for each layer of iron. Once the coloring process is completed I can start the assembly where I weld each layer of Iron into place on the frame along with the braided wire and clips on the back for hanging. Each piece is completed with multiple layers of clear coat for protection.

LLANA

	Description	Made with oil painted cement, mosaic glass, and cedar driftwood over a steel frame, llana is a beautiful wood nymph. The glittering greens of her mosaic glass and painted skin suggest foliage, and her cedar hips bear the naturally patterned ridges and fissures of the forest. The embryonic stone cradled in her belly represents life, and her arm curls gently around the curve of her stomach to protect it.

Ilana is made from durable materials and has been exhibited in many outdoor CO art shows.

MAHINA

Description	Mahina is a bioluminescent water nymph whose lithe sapphire body is feminine yet fish-like. Her full lips are quirked in a slight smirk, and she raises one eyebrow slightly, daring you to come closer. Mahina means "moonlight" in Hawaiian. She is the night, while her sister Cahaya, whose name means "light" in Indonesian, is the day. Cahaya's eyes and hands point up toward the sunlight, while Mahina's point down toward the viewer - and the underworld. Together they are the guardians of the sea. KINGMAKER

Description	A Steel Pyramid with heavy iron sword sticking out of the top. The Pyramid has 4 all seeing eyes made from colored glass and stainless steel, one on each face. The sword is attached to a spring on the inside so that it appears to be loose. This sculpture is modeled after the "Sword in the Stone" legend. I originally created it as a response to vandalism. This piece gives would be vandals an outlet for all of their excess energy. They can pull on the sword all day long but it is not coming out. Unless they are King Arthur. Has a weird attraction to small kids.
